

To whom this may concern,

In a world with a lot of dead ends, ASK often seems too good to be true. I can't express how many times I have reached out and received immediate support whether it be advice, information or funding - the volunteers and donors with ASK are always extremely eager to help and they always do in more ways than one.

From sponsoring my son in sporting events, donating during fundraising, helping us set up and navigate virtual school and now bridging the gap in therapy funding, making it possible for my son to start off this school year in the write foot. The support that this group provides for the Autism community is like none other and deserves praise. I don't know what I would do without the foundation that ASK provided during some of the most difficult times. I hope the volunteers and donors know what a huge impact they have and continue these efforts for years to come.

Sincerely,
Kasey Platt
